Columbus October 16 - A record crowd of 17,000 athletes toed the line for the start of the 32nd annual Nationwide Insurance Columbus Marathon and fifth annual Columbus Half Marathon. Many runners' goals were to just finish while others wanted to run a qualifying Boston Marathon time while a few runners were trying to make the USA Olympic Marathon qualifying standard.

Former Malone University athlete Paul Robinson now living in Flagstaff would take the lead early with Kenyan runner Peter Kemboi drafting off of Robinson as they hit the halfway point together in 1:09:03. Perrysburg's Matthew Folk would be would hit the halfway point in 1:09:48. Robinson would get a two second lead on Kemboi at the 20 mile mark with his 1:46:25 clocking with Folk 34 seconds back. As many marathoners know the race is really the last six miles and Folk would pass a fading Kemboi at the 23 mile mark and would then focus on closing on Robinson. Folk would pass Robinson just before the 25 mile mark Folk would go on to win his second Columbus Marathon 2:19:47 (also won in 2008) and take home the $3,000 top prize money.

The 35 year old Folk who manage a Second Sole Athletic Store in Perrysburg was hoping to reach the Men's Olympic Trials Marathon standard of 2:19. Folk finished 50th in the USA Men's Olympic Trials in 2004 and was 39 in 2008. In 2008 the USA Track and Field Men's Distance Committee had an "A" standard of 2:20:00 and a "B" standard of 2:22, but the men's long distance committee eliminated the 'B' standard this year.

Robinson who also was trying to reach the USA Men's Olympic Marathon standard finished second in 2:20:30 and win $1,500. Kemboi hung on for the bronze and $1,000 prize. Cincinnati's Christopher Reis had hopes of going to the Marathon Trials finished fourth in 2:21:39. Oklahoma's Scott Downard (2:25:33), Ann Arbor's Ian Forsyth 2:26:55), Massachusetts' Danilo Corderio (2:28:07) and Van Wert's Brendon Moody (2:28:38).
